

The current attempts by specific business sectors to influence the FCC is a blatant case of "special interests" wanting to have their way irregardless of what elected representatives have established for their constituents within their state. I urge the FCC to take a position that allows individuals the privacy protection granted under the state laws guarding them from unsolicited intrusions by telemarketing.